WELCOME

Olá e bem-vindos à nossa conferência!

After several years of successful conferences in the United States, the International School Choice and Reform Conference is delighted to welcome you to our 2019 conference.

This year, we're offering some new features that we hope will make your experience even more enjoyable. Lisbon is a wonderful venue for our meeting, with a first-class hotel venue, marvelous food, and world-class sights. We hope that you will take the time to visit Lisbon's castle, museums and historic center. If you can, take some time to travel on the local buses to Belém (just a few minutes away) to visit the Jerónimos Monestary and Belém Tower. And make sure to enjoy a pastel de nata with your morning coffee or tea.

ISCRC is school choice collaboration and scholarship. We are delighted to join with the European Association for Education Law and Policy (ELA) to expand policy and legal discussions and enable even more broad ranging cross discipline research. ELA leaders have participated at all levels in the planning of this year's meeting and you will see the results in the marvelous program for which we thank Professor Ben Scafidi and his Program Committee.

While we are expressing gratitude, please join me in thanking Professor Jan DeGroof of the Universitet Antwerpen, Dr. Rodrigo Queiroz e Melo of Universidade Católica Portuguesa, and Professor Patrick Wolf of the University of Arkansas for the critical role they played in planning this conference. Particular note should be made of the contributions of EdChoice and Keri Hunter, without whom there would be no conference. There are, of course, many others to whom thanks is owed and I refer readers to the list of Planning Committee members, all of whom gave their time and expertise to making this conference a success.

More than anything else, the ISCRC has always featured high-level scholarship and the opportunity for scholars and practitioners to meet with one another in an intimate setting where future studies and collaborations will be born. It is my hope that every participant will take advantage of this opportunity to meet new colleagues and explore new points of view in the study of school choice and reform policies. This, together with the exciting paper and symposium sessions, will have made all the work worthwhile.

Aloha,

School Choice in the United States: Opportunities and Challenges in Urban Communities

Karen Drezner (Leveraging Leaders) – Critical Conversation Leader

Over the past two decades, school choice has flourished across the United States. This is particularly poignant for urban communities, where educational quality has been a significant concern for far too long. Although many cities have faced a myriad of challenges, including but not limited to financial reallocations, student enrollment variances, shifting political interests and the powerful influence of teacher unions, fascinating innovative models have developed, and cross sector collaborations have blossomed. Participants will focus on a variety of case studies from cities like Boston, New York City and New Orleans. Utilizing what they learn from these case studies as well as their own expertise and experience, they will engage in critical dialogue to 1) identify and consider how to successfully overcome key policy and practice challenges and 2) contemplate how to create and maintain diverse communities of high-quality schools that ensure all students thrive academically, developmentally and civically.

Panelist: Sonia Park (Diverse Charter Schools Coalition)
